Master Naturalist Program

University of Illinois Extension Sangamon-Menard Unit invites your organization to learn more about the University of Illinois Extension Master Naturalist program.

The mission of the University of Illinois Extension Master Naturalist Program is to provide science-based educational opportunities that connect people with nature and help them become engaged environmental stewards. Through the University of Illinois Extension Master Naturalist Program individuals experience nature, practice natural resource stewardship, develop knowledge of and respect for the environment.

This program is for any adult who has a desire to:

- Successfully complete approximately 70 hours of weekday daytime training
- Have a sincere desire to learn and share natural resource information within our community
- Be able to communicate effectively
- Be willing to devote time to volunteering and to attend continuing education each year

An informational meeting for potential partners will be held on Wednesday, December 9, at 1 p.m. at the University of Illinois Extension Building #30, Illinois State Fairgrounds, Springfield. For directions to our building or to view a map visit our website at <http://web.extension.uiuc.edu/sangamonmenard/>
